

We had a great time in London. Our hostel wasn't very clean and you had to follow many rules but still it was brilliant to be there.

We were in the centre of the city which had the advantage to be close to the underground and the train station. And fortunately we also had a McDonalds and other fast food restaurants right around the corner. Shops like Tesco weren't much further away. As you can see we had an easy chance to get a fast lunch or to buy some snacks for the evening.

But not only the position of the hostel was good. In the lobby there were some relaxing chairs and we had the possibility to check your E-mail or Whatsapp because there we had W-Lan. We also could use the breakfast room for playing games in the evening, which is very helpful when you're under 18 and aren't allowed to go into the pubs. In the morning there was a prepared breakfast, you could choose between bread with butter and jam or marmalade together with coffee or eggs.

In our room there wasn't much space but we had our own toilet with a shower. I better don't write about how clean our room was...even with this little problem we had a brilliant time and not a very clean but a great home in this unknown city.

Part of the breakfast room

One of our rooms